'This is a great opportunity to ask the experts about the 'digital world' and children's e-safety'

Childnet

Childnet International is an international children's charity (set up in 1995) that is working to help to make the Internet a great and safe place for children see www.childnet.com. As well as showcasing the incredible ways that children are using new technology for good, Childnet works to respond to the potential risks facing children via new technology, and run awareness campaigns on Internet safety, and contributes to policy development in this area.

E-safety in schools

How is ICT used in schools and how do they assess potential risks?
What is an Acceptable Use Policy and how does this apply to yourself and your child?
What should you do if you have e-safety issues relating to your child and their school?

Orange

'As a provider of mobile and internet services Orange feel they have a responsibility to ensure that people are using them safely and responsibly. Having delivered an education programme to schools about safe use of the internet, Orange identified a gap in knowledge between children and parents and hope that by educating parents there will be a better understanding of how to keep their children safe when using the web at home.'

Metropolitan Police

The Metropolitan Police Service is dedicated to ensuring the welfare and safety of children and young people in London and, with partners, to identifying and protecting children at risk.
